Title: Graduation Writing Test (GWT) exemptions for some postbaccalaureate students.

Names and Titles of Proponents: Dr. Salomón Oldak, Faculty Director of Graduate Studies;
Dr. Laura Massa, Associate Vice President for Academic Programs.

Keywords: Masters, postbaccalaureate, Graduation Writing test.

Background:

Title V 40402.1 and CSU EO 665 mandate that graduate-level students shall demonstrate writing proficiency before graduation. To demonstrate writing proficiency, it has been common practice to require from all postbaccalaureate students to take and pass the Graduation Writing Test (GWT) or Graduation Writing Assessment Requirement (GWAR) as is known elsewhere in the CSU system; if they haven't taken it as part of an undergraduate requirement.

However, CSU EO 665 (C.4) allows writing proficiency certification in ways other than a test. Since many postbaccalaureate students have demonstrated writing proficiency through their undergraduate degrees before admission to the university, the GWT requirement seems to be redundant for these students.

At least one other CSU (<http://www.csulb.edu/academic-advising/graduation-writing-assessment-requirement-gwar/gwar-guidelines-students>) exempts the GWT requirement for graduate students who have obtained undergraduate degrees from institutions that are based in countries where the primary language for instruction is English, or if students can otherwise demonstrate writing proficiency through the GWT or GMAT tests.
