

Citation Style

by Zuoyue Wang based on The Chicago Manual of Style

A. Footnotes (note the differences between footnotes and bibliography)

Books with authors:

¹Anthony Brundage, Going to the Sources: A Guide to Historical Research and Writing (Wheeling, IL: Harlan Davidson, 1997), 56. [If the city of publication is well-known, such as New York, you do not need to give the name of the state.]

²Brundage, Going to the Sources, 58. [Use last name and abbreviated title for subsequent citations of the same source; this rule applies to articles too.]

Books with editors:

Wen-Hsin Yeh (ed.), Becoming Chinese: Passages to Modernity and Beyond (Berkeley and Los Angeles: University of California Press, 2000), 2-3.

Articles in a scholarly journal by a single author:

Zuoyue Wang, "Responding to Silent Spring: Scientists, Popular Science Communication, and Environmental Policy in the Kennedy Years," Science Communication 19, no. 4 (December 1997): 142.

Articles in a scholarly journal with co-authors:

Peter Neushul and Zuoyue Wang, "Between the Devil and the Deep Sea: C. K. Tseng, Mariculture, and the Politics of Science in Modern China," Isis 91, no. 1 (March 2000): 59-88.

Articles in an edited book:

William Kirby, "Engineering China: Birth of the Developmental State, 1928-1937," in Becoming Chinese: Passages to Modernity and Beyond, ed. Wen-Hsin Yeh (Berkeley and Los Angeles: University of California Press, 2000), 140.

Oral history interview:

Interview with Chang-lin Tien by Zuoyue Wang, March 19, 1999, Berkeley, CA.

Newspaper and popular magazine articles:

Ralph Vartabedian, "U.S. Funnel Billions to Science to Defend Against Terrorism," Los Angeles Times, March 7, 2004, A1.

Letters to the editor of a newspaper:

Zuoyue Wang, "Fang Lizhi" (letter to the editor), Los Angeles Times, March 10, 1989, A6.

Website:

Anon. to J. Edgar Hoover on Albert Einstein, April 21, 1953, available from FBI Freedom of Information Act Reading Room, "Albert Einstein," Part 7, <http://foia.fbi.gov/einstein/einstein7a.pdf>, accessed in October 2003.

Video:

By the People: The Election of Barack Obama, directed by Alicia Sams and Amy Rice (New York: HBO Home Video, 2010), DVD. [find info on a video by searching for it in the library's catalog]

B. Bibliography

- Brundage, Anthony. Going to the Sources: A Guide to Historical Research and Writing. Wheeling, IL: Harlan Davidson, 1997. (“Ctrl + t” instead of the tab in Word for hanging indentation)
- By the People: The Election of Barack Obama*. Directed by Alicia Sams and Amy Rice. New York: HBO Home Video, 2010. DVD, 116 minutes.
- Kirby, William. “Engineering China: Birth of the Developmental State, 1928-1937.” In Becoming Chinese: Passages to Modernity and Beyond, ed. Wen-Hsin Yeh, 137-160. Berkeley and Los Angeles: University of California Press, 2000.
- Vartabedian, Ralph. “U.S. Funnel Billions to Science to Defend Against Terrorism.” Los Angeles Times, March 7, 2004, A1.
- Wang, Zuoyue. “Responding to Silent Spring: Scientists, Popular Science Communication, and Environmental Policy in the Kennedy Years.” Science Communication 19, no. 4 (December 1997): 141-163. [Notice that there is a period after the article title and that here you give the inclusive page numbers of the article.]
- Yeh, Wen-Hsin, ed. Becoming Chinese: Passages to Modernity and Beyond. Berkeley and Los Angeles: University of California Press, 2000.