Physics Student Finds Herself and Her Passion

When Rosalie Williams came out as trans to her parents they stopped providing financial support. It could’ve meant the end of her college career. Fortunately, she found financial support in the form of scholarships, first the Mary Mogge scholarship, and more recently the TEAM-UP Together (TU-T) scholarship.

College of Science Research may Reduce Pesticide Use

In the Santa Clara River Valley something is happening on the edge of some avocado and citrus orchards. Researchers are planting hedgerows and floral strips that may help reduce the need for some pesticides. The effort is being led by Assistant Professor of Biological Sciences Elizabeth Scordato.

The plantings attract predators to the orchards that will eat bugs and possibly rodents as well.
