Explain how the course meets the description of the GE SubArea(s). Please select appropriate outcomes according to the GE Area/SLO mapping.

This course offers an understanding of the intersections between the fields of politics, marketing and communication. It examines public policy toward social issues and develops an understanding of how political communication shapes political responses to these issues. The course examines the historical trends in political communication and examines its effects in cross-cultural contexts. Examples of political texts, speeches and others will serve as primary sources that students will discuss and analyse.

Describe how these outcomes relate to the associated GE Learning Outcomes listed below.*

- 1a) Students write a group paper, op-eds and a campaign analysis.
- 1b) Students will present their group project to the class.
- 1c) Students will research and write a group paper.
- 1d) Exams, op-eds, the campaign analysis and the group project will require students to construct sound arguments.
- 2d) Exams op-eds, the campaign analysis, and the group project will require students to integrate information from the communication, political science, and marketing fields.
- 3a) Exams and the group project will require students to analyze historical developments of political communication, as well as its role in disparate cultures.
- 3b) Students will analyze principles, methods, value systems, and ethics of social issues confronting local and global communities throughout the course, with a particular emphasis on the ethics of political communication.

IV. Instructional Materials

Provide bibliography that includes texts that may be used as the primary source for instruction, and other appropriate reference materials to be used in instruction. The reference list should be current, arranged alphabetically by author and the materials should be listed in accepted bibliographic form.

Instructional Materials*

The course will follow the most current and widely used undergraduate text in the subfield of political communication, and incorporate supplementary strategic communication texts and articles assessing emerging campaign and election trends:

Issenberg, Sasha (2012). The Victory Lab: The Secret Science of Winning Campaigns. New York, NY: Random House.

Luntz, Frank (2007). Words That Work: It's Not What You Say, It's What People Hear. New York, NY: Hachette Book Group.

Perloff, Richard M. (2014). The Dynamics of Political Communication: Media and Politics in a Digital Age. New York, NY: Routledge.

Faculty are encouraged to make all materials accessible. Indicate with an asterisk those items that have had accessibility (ATI/Section 508) reviewed. For more information, <http://www.cpp.edu/~accessibility>

V. Minimum Student Material

List any materials, supplies, equipment, etc., which students must provide, such as notebooks, computers, internet access, special clothing or uniforms, safety equipment, lockers, sports equipment, etc. Note that materials that require the assessment of a fee may not be included unless the fee has been approved according to University procedures.

Minimum Student Material* Standard student materials.

VI. Minimum College Facilities

List the university facilities/equipment that will be required in order to offer this class, such as gymnastic equipment, special classroom, technological equipment, laboratories, etc.

Minimum College Facilities* Standard classroom.

VII. Course Outline

Describe specifically what will be included in the course content. This should not be a repetition of the course description but an expansion that provides information on specific material to be included in the class, e.g. lecture topics, skills to be taught, etc. This should not be a week-by-week guide unless all instructors are expected to follow that schedule.

Course Outline*

1. Political communication and democracy
2. Campaigns and media effects: agenda-setting, framing, and priming
3. News media as a political institution
4. Electoral campaigns
5. Techniques in message formation
6. Rhetorical governance
7. Issue framing and issue ownership
8. Political advertising
9. Market research and data-driven campaigning
10. Digital and social media campaigns
11. Influence of race and gender
12. Democratic and ethical implications of political communication

VIII. Instructional Methods

Describe the type(s) of method(s) that are required or recommended for the instruction of this course (lectures, demonstrations, etc.). Include any method that is essential to the course, such as the use of particular tools or software.

Instructional Methods* Lecture/discussion

IX. Evaluation of Outcomes

Describe the methods to be used to evaluate students' learning, i.e. written exams, term papers, projects, participation, quizzes, attendance, etc.*

A variety of evaluation instruments will be used to assess student learning outcomes. They include the following:

- Reading responses
- Quizzes and exams
- Op-eds
- Campaign analyses
- Political ad group project

Describe the meaningful writing assignments to be included.*

Campaign analyses, group project and op-ed assignments are writing intensive. Students will receive feedback on their writing during the semester on the writing for future improvement.

Discuss how these methods may be used to address the course and program outcomes, as appropriate. Include or attach a matrix to align the evaluation
