

Course Instruction Mode Definitions

Instructional Modes	PS Code	Instructional Mode Definition
Face-to-Face	P	Course meets face-to face. Syllabus/grades may be posted online.
Web-Assisted	PW	Course meets face-to-face. Syllabus/grades may be posted online. Some course materials/activities are online and require active student access.
Hybrid with Asynchronous Component	HA	Course uses both face-to-face and asynchronous instruction and meets face-to-face for approximately 25%-75% of the course contact hours prescribed by the course type and units.
Hybrid with Synchronous Component	HS	Course uses both face-to-face and synchronous instruction and meets face-to- face for approximately 25%-75% of the course contact hours prescribed by the course type and units.
Asynchronous Local	AL	Course instruction is delivered in an asynchronous instruction mode. Face-to-face meetings at specified days/times may be required for orientation and/or evaluation of student learning.
Synchronous Local	SL	Course instruction is delivered in a synchronous instruction mode. Face-to-face meetings at specified days/times may be required for orientation and/or evaluation of student learning.
Fully Asynchronous	A	Course instruction is delivered in an asynchronous instruction mode. Students do not need to be on campus for any element of the course. Electronic meetings at specified days/times may be required for orientation and/or evaluation of student learning.
Fully Synchronous	S	Course instruction is delivered in a synchronous instruction mode. Students do not need to be on campus for any element of the course.

NOTE:

Asynchronous instruction is defined as instruction offered via web technology, CD-ROM, or placed on student-accessible PCs, available at time/location of students' choice, subject to restrictions set by instructor.

Synchronous instruction is defined as instruction offered via closed circuit to a second classroom, or live remote broadcast via public airwaves, web chat room, or web-based streaming video to PCs available at specific days/times.